(c) to (e) From 1.8.2007 to 22.10.2008, Air India's new Boeing 777-200LR and 777-300ER aircraft have done 3782 takes off and only three technical incidents have been reported, which counts for 0.08 technical incidents per hundred takes off. In the smoke incident, Air India has observed that the affected Seat Electronics Boxes are Thales 15000 IFE system components and located below Seat Groups in the Aft area where the aircraft contour narrows down. In this narrowed section, the width of seat-group reduced. Boeing in conjunction with Thales have come out with a solution in modifying the Seat Electronics Boxes to include a thermal fuse which would cut off power before emanating smoke, changing the potting material of the inductor and changing the existing capacitor to polymer micro capacitor.

Boeing will incorporate the above modifications on all the new B777 aircraft which are to be delivered to Air India from April 2009 onwards and the modification on the existing aircraft will be carried out by Air India on receipt of modification Service Bulletin from Boeing.
